It's loosely biographical, telling the life story of Thorfinn Karlsefni, his wife, his founding of a settlement in Newfoundland, and his interaction with the Viking king Knut. Moran basically bashes you over the head with his affection for Selene but again this apparently intelligent woman remains clueless. His bizarre, indistinct black and white images provide plenty of opportunity for the imagination to run wild and are a perfect complement to a collection of scary stories. Progress was leisurely, as by then the brakes were worn out and the rear wheel rim crumbling.
